Art Unit: 1711

1. The numbering of claims is not in accordance with 37 CFR 1.126 which requires the original numbering of the claims to be preserved throughout the prosecution. When claims are canceled, the remaining claims must not be renumbered. When new claims are presented, they must be numbered consecutively beginning with the number next following the highest numbered claims previously presented (whether entered or not).

Misnumbered claim 7-12 been renumbered 11-16.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 13, 15 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Yukuta (755).

Yukuta discloses flexible foams comprising an isocyanate component, an isocyanate reactive component, an anhydride and a catalyst in examples 2 and 3 of Table 1. The density falls within the specified range of the claims.

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 1-4 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yukuta in view of Hicks (GB2196974).

6. Yukuta discloses the process for making foams comprising polyisocyanates, polyisocyanate reactive components, catalysts, and anhydrides (see the above rejection). Yukuta differs from the claims by showing that either an organic metal or an amine can be used as the catalyst (see claim 8). He differs from dependent claim 3 by not showing premixing the anhydride with the polyisocyanate.

7. Hicks teaches that an anhydride mixed with a polyisocyanate can help stabilize the polyisocyanate.

8. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to choose an amine catalyst in the process and product of Yukuta because it's been held obvious to choose one from a limited number of choices. It would have been obvious to mix the anhydride with the polyisocyanate in order to help maintain the stability of the polyisocyanate per the teachings of Hicks.

9. Claims 1, 11, 12 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Weber in view of Yukuta.

10. Weber discloses foams comprising polyisocyanates, polyisocyanate reactive components, and amine catalysts (see example 3). In the abstract, he discloses using these foams for shoe soles and for upholstery. He discloses densities ranging from 200-700 kg/m<sup>3</sup>. He differs from the claims by not disclosing an anhydride component.

11. Yukuta teaches that the addition of an anhydride to a flexible foam improves the foaming stability (col. 3, line 46).

12. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to add an anhydride to the process of Weber in order to enhance the foaming stability.

13. Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

14. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within ~~TWO MONTHS~~ of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
